Read the passages below. Then choose the BEST answer. 選出最適當的答案。

The public should not put all the blame on the teachers and the education system for the recent student suicides. The responsibility should also be shouldered by parents and society.

Most of us tend to be compromising with children and giving way to their attitude. Therefore, youngsters have become very self-centered. They think that they can get whatever they want.

Parents also tend to take their children's side when they complain about their teachers. Now teachers have to worry about homework or punishment being used as an excuse for suicide.

On the other hand, we often expect too much from our children. Intelligence is inborn: children do not have a choice, so we should accept them for what they are and encourage them to do their best.

With the divorce rate rising, single-parent families are growing. Children raised by a single parent are usually under more pressure and lack the love and attention which children in two parent families get.

Part B

Over the years fashions have come and gone over the issue of whether mixed or single sex schools are more successful. It used to be believe that single-sex schools created an artificial climate. After all, the argument runs, when they are out of school they live in a mixed society, and when they get jobs they have to work together. An additional argument was that girls provided a civilizing influence, preventing the fights and rough behavior. Now, however, a number of research projects have shown that in the classroom boys grab a disproportionate amount of the teacher's time, whether by outstandingly good or outstandingly bad behavior, leaving girls on the sidelines. Especially in science and computer studies, girls are left out as boys rush to get first use of machines and equipment. It seems that girls can achieve far better academic results if there are no boys.
